145 roles created by council job project

ONE HUNDRED and forty five vacancies have been secured to help local people off benefits and into work.

And 23 apprenticeships have been provided to help young people into jobs and prevent them from depending on benefits.

Around 17 employers have agreed to create further roles and opportunities for local people who have been hardest hit by the government's welfare reforms.

They include people who have struggled to find work and are seeing their benefits slashed or capped.

Families facing the biggest benefit cuts are being supported by the royal borough which has set up a £6m Greenwich Local Labour Programme to help them into work.

So far 38 have started jobs with the royal borough in street cleansing, waste collection and parks. A further 16 candidates have been interviewed for the next tranche of recruitment this month while 23 apprenticeships are due to start with Cleansweep.

In addition, 13 people have been supported into employment with local firms while over 100 have been referred to GLLaB, the royal borough's jobs and training agency.

Get in league with us

THANKS so much for including the story of the new Blackheath People's Football League in GT. I received emails immediately the story appeared and two teams actually played the following Sunday (June 2). What's really pleasing is that people say they like the idea of playing football as grown-ups, with self-governed games without referees.

Any other teams, or individual players, who want to join us during the summer are welcome to call me on 07775 426776. In these times of austerity it won't cost you a penny.

Stefan Imeson, organiser, Blackheath People's League

Second tunnel is not the solution

I NOTICE that you are promoting the idea of another tunnel under the Thames next to the Blackwall Tunnel, the 'Silvertown Link', to take the pressure off the route north from here in Greenwich. Yes, the approach road, the A102 and the tunnel itself are often congested. However, many cars using this route have only one person in them - the driver. The solution is not to build another tunnel adjacent to the Blackwall Tunnel. This would further build up congestion and pollution on the Peninsula and in the north and east Greenwich. The answer is to use more public transport - buses (eg the 108), the DLR, Crossrail and the river. We need a good quality of life as well as jobs, and this means fewer car journeys, however convenient our cars may be in the short term.

Mrs Pat Preston, Blackheath

● The council is supporting TfL's proposal for an additional tunnel at Silvertown. In recent years the building of the DLR extensions, the Jubilee Line and, to a lesser extent, the cable car has seen a huge improvement in ways to cross the river on public transport. Crossrail will be a further improvement. The council will continue to promote further cross-river public transport improvements but there will always be a need for vehicular crossings. Currently the lack of capacity at Blackwall is stopping growth which means a lack of job opportunities for our residents. As part of their design process TfL will address concerns about congestion and air quality.

Promises not kept for common good

FURTHER to my previous letter regarding Woolwich Common and the cursory response in Greenwich Time (April 30), no grass has been sown and no turf has been laid. It would appear that Greenwich Council, although not the landowner, is not prepared to intervene or even investigate the matter. As for the MoD I expect they would probably be happier if the public stayed off the common anyway.

R. Charlton, Woolwich Common
● THE council has raised its concerns with the ODA/MoD about the slow progress with the final works of restoration, and offered assistance to speed up the restoration. LOCOG and the ODA were responsible for removing all temporary structures, reinstating ground levels and planting new trees. After those works the MoD is responsible for the five-year after-care. The original decommissioning programme linked to the planning approval required all restoration works to be completed by March, 2013. The replacement trees have been planted. However, the final grass seeding has not yet taken place - partly due to the bad weather. It is also clear that further preparation work is required before seeding can take place, which pushed back the re-seeding programme.

Grim parts of the Thames Path

MY other half and I are on a health kick at the moment and walked along the Thames Path from the Cutty Sark to The O2 on Bank Holiday Monday. Parts of the walk were lovely but others pretty grim. We know money is short but is there any hope of improvements to the desolate segments?

Sandra Bishop, Lee

● THOSE less attractive parts of the path are being upgraded as riverside developments take place. The next major works are currently in progress at Lovells Wharf.

SUPERMARKET volunteers have helped to give new shelf life to unused land at a Greenwich primary school.

Fifteen staff from the soon-to-open Waitrose store in Greenwich went to check out the land at James Wolfe primary school over half term.

They were joined by pupils and their families and worked together to develop a new garden space at the school in Randall Place, Greenwich.

The project at James Wolfe involved preparing the overgrown ground for planting, painting benches, laying decking in a gazebo and painting the surrounding fence railings. The store also donated fruit and veg seeds, and once grown, the produce will be sold to raise funds for the school.

Eight-year-old Lilly told GT: "It was lots of fun helping out and tidying the garden. Also, I had fun serving coffees and biscuits to all the volunteers." Aedan, also eight, added: "The garden area is now nice and tidy and great fun to play in. All the bugs sticking to the fence are gone now - and I like the blue paint!"

Executive headteacher Mary Whitehead said: "James Wolfe has wonderful outdoor spaces and with the support of the team of volunteers from Waitrose Greenwich, and a team of staff and parents, we have been able to make it even better. Children are now looking forward to growing fruit and vegetables in the garden area using seeds donated by Waitrose."

The new Greenwich superstore is opening on Thursday June 20 at Dreadnought Wharf, 1 Victoria Way.

NEW RECRUITS: Cllr Chris Roberts with some of the first locals to benefit from the Greenwich Local Labour Programme

Of these 233 are following GLLaB training schemes to boost their chances of getting a job.

The royal borough launched the pioneering GLLP earlier this year as the first wave of government welfare reforms came into force. The programme, designed to help thousands of low or no income families, was introduced with childcare initiatives to eliminate that as a barrier to work.

Royal borough council leader Cllr Chris

Roberts said: "We already have a proud record helping people gain the skills and experience they need to get into work. This new targeted programme is aimed at those worst affected by benefit changes as we felt it was important to help them to secure work."

"Together with local employers, we have created a number of vacancies to provide long term employment and we plan to expand the number of positions considerably with other employers who have agreed to provide further employment opportunities."

AT YOUR SERVICES: a young library user guides Cllr Peter Kotz through the basics on the new computer system

ExcITing news for libraries...

LIBRARIES around the borough have been catapulted into the 21st century after being kitted out with new PCs and IT systems, writes Grace Lipski.

The first phase of the royal borough's £1million scheme in upgrading public PCs in libraries, started in December last year and was recently completed.

The next phase will involve replacing staff computers, integrating the library management system to greater support visitors to the library and enabling a pro-active support environment, due for completion by the end of the year.

Around 280 new PCs were replaced in the 12 libraries across the borough, along with the installation of new software, printers and scanners.

Internet connections have improved as a result, bringing faster broadband speeds and greater online access. All the libraries in the borough now have wi-fi, enabling residents to use their own laptops and mobile devices.

The investment is also part of the royal borough's anti-poverty strategy to help local people find jobs, study and pursue leisure interests.

Cllr Peter Kotz, the council's member for culture and the creative industries, gave the new PCs a go at Thamesmere library last week. He said: "I'm very pleased with the upgraded system in our libraries and I think the range of technology available to residents will help enhance many aspects of daily life, from helping with homework to finding local events and job searching."

A new approach for Androids

A SMART phone app which was launched on iPhone a year ago has been given its Android debut, writes Rod Kitson.

The Get Greenwich app aims to give users up-to-the-minute info on what's on locally, and was created by Charlton company, Fit Creative.

Fit's Kara Penn told GT: "We wanted to create a product that was locally focused. We thought it was about time someone produced something using up-to-date technology." It costs 69p to download, and the creators say the new version is an improvement, after glitches with the original. Company founder Jonathan Cook said: "We looked at the Facebook app and the BBC

Sport app to look at the current trend in navigational android, and that's the style we adopted."

Kara said: "Everybody has to source their information from a variety of websites with a limited number of events listings. There is so much going on in Greenwich that people were missing out. With the phone, it's something you are going to have with you at all times."

Jonathan added: "It covers all the events in cinemas, theatres, pub quizzes, festivals, niche events – we've deliberately kept it broad. We tried to create something very comprehensive from the grand to the humble."

Businesses are not charged to join the network. "We've kept it free to submit to, as long as it's something to do with leisure time – eating drinking, shopping, going out," he said.

ABBEY Wood residents can learn more about the works planned for the arrival of Crossrail at a public meeting next month.

Locals are invited to a public information drop-in day on July 20 from 1-7pm.

It takes place at the Abbey Wood Community Group Centre, 4 Knee Hill, Abbey Wood, SE2 OYS.

The event will be hosted by Network Rail which will outline the programme of works to start this summer.

The rail maintenance operator is carrying out vital survey works as part of the multi million pound project that will link Maidenhead and Heathrow in the west to Shenfield and Abbey Wood in the east, via new tunnels under central London.

During the drop-in locals can learn more about Crossrail, the construction timetable, changes to local rail services and details of the new Abbey Wood station.

They'll also learn more about survey works on roads north and south of the railway line from Church Manorway in the west to the area near Northwood primary school in the east from July 15 to August 24.

The works are necessary to located buried services and investigate drains by digging holes and trenches and will take up to three days in each location.

Network Rail is sending letters and information leaflets to more than 8,000 homes around Abbey Wood station this month and leaflets will also be available in local libraries.

Steve Lord, a spokesman for Network Rail, said: "Network Rail is a key partner in making Crossrail a reality and we are responsible for the design and development of the parts of Crossrail that are on the existing network.

"We apologise for any inconvenience these works may cause, however, they are similar to works residents have seen previously. We will be writing to residents again if any further significant works are planned during the summer."

Cllr Denise Hyland, the royal borough's cabinet member for regeneration, enterprise and skills, said: "Crossrail is set to transform the area, dramatically improving transport links to the major financial and entertainment centres of

Cheers to brewing new apprentices

COLLEGE and school leavers are being called to the bar for apprenticeships with a Greenwich master brewer. It's a chance for young people to work with some of the leading experts in brewing and kick-start a career in an exciting industry. The two-year apprenticeships are being offered by the Meantime Brewing Company which has partnered with the royal borough and the London Apprenticeship Company to offer three young people the chance to get a career in brewing. The apprenticeships start on September 1 and include a mix of on-the-job training and education. Students will work with some of the leading experts in their field, including Meantime brewmaster and founder Alastair Hook. Apprentices will work as part of the team looking at the science behind the brewing process; overseeing the quality and consistency of product and the vital maintenance of specialised machinery. Cllr Denise Hyland, the royal borough's cabinet member for regeneration, enterprise and skills, said: "Meantime is one of our success stories and we are delighted that they are creating this opportunity for residents. It's further evidence of the work the council is doing to promote apprenticeships and job opportunities for young people." as well as supporting valued local companies. ● Young people aged 16-24 can find out more by contacting Simone at Greenwich Local Labour and Business (GLLaB) on 020 8921 2440.

FREE MOTs for men are being offered as part of a six-week campaign to improve their health. They include a chance to get things off your chest by talking to health advisors.

The pit stops are part of the Greenwich Men's Health Roadshow - Let's Talk About It, which is calling at venues across the borough until July 14.

The roadshow has been organised by the royal borough in partnership with Charlton Athletic Community Trust (CACT) and national charity, the Men's Health Forum to encourage Greenwich men to talk about their health, life stresses and worries.

The roadshow coincides with Men's Health Week which runs from June 10 to 16. Women visiting the roadshow can receive help and information to help them improve the health of the men in their lives.

The campaign is supported by Chris Powell, Charlton Athletic FC manager, who said: "Men are known for ignoring health symptoms. Campaigns such as this are a great way to offer support and give men the encouragement they need to take action on their health and talk about their concerns in an informal setting."

"I would urge men to go down to the roadshow and have a chat with one of the advisors if they have something they want to talk about."

John Fahy, the royal borough's cabinet member for health, adults and older people, added: "Our health and wellbeing strategy shows a clear commitment to addressing men's health as a priority, and the council is keen to support the wide programme

THE borough's Filipino community celebrated their country's 115 years of independence in style, with an afternoon of cultural fun in General Gordon Square, Woolwich.

They first held an open-air mass in the grounds of St Peter's Church, then paraded to the square in traditional dress. The event was called the Flores De Mayo, which means the flowers of May.

Adults and children performed traditional dances, and enjoyed food, sweets and delicacies from the Philippines.

Organiser Moises Espanola said: "We had people from other Filipino communities around London join us. The event was a success because of the help from a range of people, especially the Mayor, Cllr Angela Cornforth, the council and the police. It was really a timely gathering for the different communities in Woolwich, and a show of unity, conciliation and solidarity after the event that had happened in Woolwich a few days earlier."

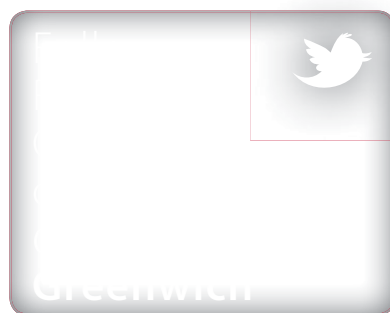

Give your views on home care services

THE Royal Borough of Greenwich is reviewing its home care services for elderly and vulnerable people and is seeking the views of service users, their carers and families to help improve the service. Consultation on the new home care services takes place as the government is urging local councils to give service users greater choice and control over the social care they receive. It also follows a recent report by the Care Quality Commission - 'Not just a Number' - which looks at home care services across the country and makes a number of recommendations about improving home care. Cllr John Fahy, the cabinet member for health, adults and older people, said: "The council is committed to providing quality services for older people. It is important to hear what we are doing well and what areas could be improved. Our priorities are about supporting service users' independence, choice and well-being. We want to ensure that your voice is heard and your needs met." Residents can give their views on local care services at one of three meetings hosted by the royal borough. They take place on June 21 from 10am -12pm and on June 24 from 2-4pm at Woolwich Town Hall, Wellington Street, Woolwich, and on July 12 from 10am to 12pm at the Eltham Centre.

HEALTH & AESTHETIC CLINIC

ON 11 May 2013 Health & Aesthetic Clinic organised an open day event. Information about the clinic's services in to slimming, body contouring, weight loss, laser hair removal, laser skin treatments and anti-ageing treatment was given out to visitors throughout the day. It was advertised in Greenwich Time 30th April 2013. Anyone walking in the clinic on the open day was put on a raffle draw with a chance to win an iPad!

There was a steady flow of people from morning onwards inquiring about services the clinic offers. Slimming treatment of Velosmooth Pro and Strawberry Laser Lipo were most sought after treatments. Clinic has seen a steady growth in Non-invasive Slimming Treatments and has invested in some of the best technology offered in the market. Reducing vest line, skin tightening and cellulite were major concerns.

Anti-ageing skin treatments were also very much in demand. People looking forward to look their best on big occasions this summer wanted longer lasting yet fast results to improve their appearance. Wrinkle injections, fillers and laser facial rejuvenation always excite everyone because of their watchability.

Laser Hair removal is one of the most popular treatment at the clinic. H&A has a laser machine which is extremely effective on all skin and hair types. Its painless technology takes Touch-factor out of the hair removal and is very safe.

By 4.30pm almost 40 people were consulted for various conditions. As the open day was progressing towards end, a call from Ann O'Mahony was received and she wanted to rush to the clinic to attend the open day.

She was the last person to walk in on the day. A draw was held for the iPad, and amazingly Ann was the winner! She couldn't believe her luck and was amazed to see her name coming out of the raffle draw. It almost felt like she was destined to win an iPad as it was her last minute decision to attend our open day after she found the clinic on internet.

The UK carers movement is 50 years old this year - and it all started right here in Greenwich.

The woman behind it was the Rev Mary Webster, (pictured left) who lived at Woolwich Arsenal and began campaigning for greater awareness of carers and tried to get a better deal for them.

She drew attention to the isolation and financial hardship women carers faced and in 1965 she formed the National Council for the Single Woman and her Dependents. She died in 1969 at only 46 years old, but her legacy continues to this day.

Carers Week began on Monday (June 10), when the spotlight turned on the many thousands who care for others who are unable to fully look after themselves.

Each day at least 6,000 people become carers in the UK, and in the borough, 22,000 people act as unpaid carers for friends or family members.

The theme for this year's Carers Week is 'Prepared to care'. It is focusing on how carers are coping, and how the growing number of carers are supported by the government.

The knock-on effects of being a carer can affect many things in people's lives including: school or college work; preventing adults from taking paid work; preventing carers from socialising and causing huge physical and mental stress.

However, all the evidence suggests that many carers don't identify themselves as a carer and feel they are just doing what anyone would do, and looking after a loved one.

In the borough, 9,000 people provide care and support for more than 20 hours per week - up from 7,000 in 2001. New legislation is on the way, with the Care Bill 2013 now going through Parliament. If agreed, it will give carers equal status to users of social services. It means they will have a legal right to an assessment of their support needs. And those with substantial or critical needs will be entitled to support. The council already provides assessments in line with the draft legislation.

Cllr John Fahy, the royal borough's cabinet member for health, adults and older people and said: "Carers with multiple responsibilities, such as working and bringing up children, while caring for an adult at the same time, are under particular stress.

"Carers of adults with mental health or substance misuse problems often suffer isolation because of the stigma attached. And older people caring for a spouse may have their own health problems, which can be made worse by heavy caring responsibilities.

"The royal borough wants to encourage carers to recognise themselves as carers, and come forward for an assessment of their needs."

Assessments will be carried out either by Greenwich Carers' Centre or by a council assessing officer who will consider the amount of caring provided and the impact on the carer.

Carers will then get advice and support, and they may be eligible for a personal payment to help ease the pressures of caring, and things like holidays, social activities, alternative therapies, or help with employment or education, such as buying a laptop or course fees.

● Carers should contact the council contact centre on 020 8921 2304 to ask for an assessment.

Caring for our carers

Royal borough offers extra support to carers ahead of new government bill

TEN years ago, baker John McAlonen from Shooters Hill took the life-changing decision to quit his job in Erith, and become a full-time carer for his mother Sylvia.

"My mum had had two back operations and needed looking after," he said. "My boss suggested I could become her official carer, and a week later I stopped in Woolwich and picked up a carers pack. It was a big decision to make. It is now my full-time job."

John is now 54 and fully able-bodied. His mother will be 80 next year. He said: "My father died 28 years ago, I have no children, and my three sisters live far away. So it was up to me to look after her. I now do all the shopping, cleaning, and ironing. If I need to take Mum on trips, she has a disabled bus pass so she can go anywhere she wants. But I don't, and I have to pay every time. This can work out very expensive for me, but she can't go anywhere without me because I'm her carer. This makes her feel a bit guilty because she loves to get out. A freedom pass for me would mean more freedom for both of us." And Sylvia added: "I love being taken to Greenwich and to Canary Wharf."

"We share our house in Aberford Gardens, and have lived here for 34 years. I've been so happy here, and we've always had such lovely neighbours."

John decided that adaptations were needed so Sylvia could have an in-and-out bath and shower, and a handrail to the front door outside. He said: "She was slipping on her back and having me over, so I got a shower with seat put in and handrails on the stairs. The council has been very good to me. They helped me with getting a grant for the adapted bathroom and a handrail to the front door."

GREENWICH Heritage Centre is going back to the future to celebrate its 10th anniversary on the Royal Arsenal.

The centre was launched when the local studies library from Woodlands and the collections of the former Greenwich Borough Museum were united under one roof in a building in Artillery Square in 2004.

To celebrate, centre staff are launching a new programme of exhibitions and activities to encourage locals to explore the range of services on offer at the centre.

They include extensive picture archives, plans, maps, newspapers, census records and parish registers. Anyone is welcome to do their own research in the search room and there are a number of staff with experience in different fields who can give advice and help you trace your family tree or research the past.

One of the main aims for the coming year is to get more people involved and there are plans to set up a Friends group along with a new committee and get more local people volunteering to help out with exhibitions and events.

Cllr Peter Kotz, the royal borough's cabinet member for cultural and creative industries, said: "We are very much the Heritage Centre for the Royal Borough of Greenwich and we want to engage with as many people and as many communities in whatever way we can whether that's through volunteers, the Friends or through the exhibition programme."

In the meantime, the centre's latest exhibition provides a good example of the way it plans to get local people more involved.

The centre regularly hosts a work experience student from the University of Greenwich on their final year and this year it's been working with Carolyn Ayers, a history student, whose area of study is the suffragettes. Carolyn used the research from her dissertation to guest curate the latest exhibition in conjunction with Heritage Centre staff.

The exhibition, 'Freedom of Spirit: The Women's Suffrage Movement in Greenwich,' runs until August 31.

It's based on the writings of Rosa May Billinghurst, a suffragette born in Blackheath to a politically active middle class family who played a pivotal role in the suffragette movement.

Rosa was disabled as an infant from illness, and was in a wheelchair for the rest of her life. Despite this, she went on to volunteer as a social worker at the Greenwich Union Workhouse and became a leading figure in the Lewisham branch of the Women's Social and Political Union. It was one of the major national campaigns for the right of women to vote, and she was a co-founder of the Greenwich and Deptford branch.

In December 1912 Billinghurst was arrested for pouring acid into a letterbox in Aberdeen Terrace, Blackheath, and was imprisoned in Holloway for eight months. "She went on hunger strike almost immediately, and there was national outcry from supporters of the suffrage movement when she was forced. She was released after only a month," Carolyn explained.

The exhibition also looks at other prominent figures in the suffrage movement as well as suffrage activity that took place in Greenwich.

Well-known suffragettes with Greenwich connections include Blackheath-born Emily Wilding Davison, who was trampled by the King's horse at the Epsom Derby in 1913, and Plumstead-born Mabel Tukey, who was especially close to Christabel and Emmeline

It includes artefacts and local studies material from the Heritage Centre collection, as well as force-feeding material borrowed from the Galleries of Justice Museum, Nottingham, and explores the impact of the First World War on women's roles in the workforce – particularly in the munitions factories of the Royal Arsenal. The exhibition is supported by a programme of events looking at various aspects of women's rights then and now with a few fun events thrown in too.

As this exhibition comes to a close in August, the Heritage Centre team will be working with members of the Charlton Park Reminiscence Project for a September showcase on six much-loved parks and open spaces.

There are also plans for an end-of-year exhibition on the changing faces of the borough's iconic buildings and long-established businesses.

The records of thanks from around the world

STAFF at the Heritage Centre have won the gratitude of people from around the world for helping them research their local connections. Jenny Jeffress from Sydney, Australia, wanted to find out more about her ancestors who lived at Anns Place on the corner of Church Street and Creek Road in the 1840s. The centre was able to discover that Anns Place was named in the 1841 census, and there had been eight baptisms in the Jeffress family. Thanking centre staff for their help, Jenny said: "I have family visiting there late this year and they were very happy to receive that information as they now have actual sites connected with our family to visit. We had a look at the churches on the computer and they look so beautiful. We are very grateful." Nearer to home, Ann Wilkinson from North London was keen to learn more about a family of shipwrights called Alfrey or Allfrey who lived locally between about 1690 and 1728. Searching through the public records, the centre was able to tell her about the marriage of shipwright Richard Alfrey to Mary Lugger in 1690, and about other family members who were watermen, ships carpenters and labourers. There was also mention of George Alfrey a surgeon in Woolwich. The dockyards of Woolwich, Deptford and Chatham often shared the labour force so people moved between them frequently.

Lies true to original

STEPHEN Fry fled the country, Laurence Olivier was sick and Barbara Streisand dried up mid-song in front of an audience of 135,000 people. While actors often suffer from bad first-night nerves, what on earth is it like for directors?

I found the director of Pack of Lies at the back of the Alexandra Hall, Charlton, apprehensive but still able to smile. "I just hope things go well," Rebecca Williams told Scene, "we had only seven short weeks to prepare." Having just starred as Daisy, in the Alexandra Players' previous play – Daisy Pulls it Off – she was keen for a chance to direct. The Players' choice of play – a fictional account behind the real life arrest of two spies – was perhaps testimony to her directorial style. "It was a collective decision, and the one we all wanted to do," Rebecca added.

When MI5 asks the Jacksons to help spy on the Krogers, their lives are disrupted forever. They are sent spinning down a rollercoaster of violent emotion from scepticism to anger to despair, posing questions on the degrees of betrayal and whether it can ever be justified.

The cast got to grips with some difficult concepts. Initially hesitant, Sue McGeehan as Barbara Jackson soon opened out, natural and at ease on the stage. Her husband, Bob, played by Mark Higgins was competent and solid and complimented his wife very well.

Keith Hartley, as Stewart the policeman was occasionally uncertain but in general commanded his role. Louise Gaul as Helen Kroger played her role with remarkable poise and should take a lead role next time. The staging was excellent, the direction unfussy, with an interesting and ambitious use of narrative, and the production – in particular the lighting, extraordinarily good.

SCENE

AS a child prodigy on the southern tip of the continent that shares his name, pianist Mervyn Africa had the chance to come to a prestigious music college in London. But it would be another two decades before he finally made the journey to England.

The South African told Scene: "At 12 I was supposed to come here after I won a competition to go to the Royal Schools of Music. But my parents were afraid of having me grow up here on my own with another family, and thought that keeping me at school was best for me."

Mervyn, 62, would first land in London in 1981, as a 29-year-old. "I loved it," he said. "It's my world, and I've lived here ever since. It was only five years ago that I went back to South Africa."

He grew up in a musical household in Cape Town, and was witness to the changes that would affect everyone – including musicians. "I started playing when I was five years old," Mervyn said. "I started playing classical with all the beginners, and was geared towards being a concert pianist. When Apartheid came in things changed. I was no longer able to do that. I was frustrated in my teenage days."

And since Apartheid finished in 1994, the music scene has opened up, says the pianist.

"It has changed a lot. It's more open and the musicians are not afraid of authority in the arts or whatever they yearn to do. They would be more wary, you couldn't do this, you couldn't do that – that's what Apartheid was."

"At that time you were quite limited, and you'd keep your best songs to yourself. Anything that was sparkling, that would encourage people to want to do the same was seen as quite a threat."

Despite the constraints, Mervyn and his peers pioneered a free-form jazz that was quite different to the

Keys to the world

Pianist Mervyn Africa tells ROD KITSON about making music under Apartheid and the differences between European and African jazz, ahead of a gig at Charlton House

"AFRICA WAS A NAME GIVEN TO THE BIGGEST FAMILIES - MY DAD WAS THE OLDEST OF 13" - Mervyn Africa

European style. "The African jazz scene is very much based on drums and single melodies," he said. "When African musicians come out to England it's about learning more harmony. There's quite a difference, but there is a similarity too."

"In an African set-up, even if it's jazz or contemporary, it's based on drums. Those are the rhythm instruments. In Europe there's more harmony and melody, and less drums."

He plays a solo show on piano at Charlton House on June 20.

He describes his musical style as 'African contemporary'. "It's a mix and a fusion of quite a lot of other textures - classical, jazz, and African. I mix them all up to make a jazz format - to make it sound 'jazz', you know."

Mixing styles is one of the cornerstones of jazz, and the pianist reckons the new school are doing that better than ever. "At the moment with the young musicians, they tend to do it naturally. What we [the older musicians] were trying to do, it comes naturally to them."

"In the Eighties here, you had to come with an original song, which was quite taxing, because you could not sound like someone else. Nowadays their identity sparks off in different directions."

"It's almost like they jumped the hurdles that we did in the Seventies and Eighties. The world now is so full of information - we yearned to have good instruments. We wanted to know about other musicians and other countries. It's so available now."

Mervyn plays Charlton House on June 20. Also on the bill is the Tamil Dance Academy and tai chi demos. Tickets £6 from www.wegotickets.com on the door from 7pm. Music from 7.30-10pm. More info on 020 8858 9497

• Mervyn has some boxes of sheet music he would like to give away, after a teaching friend sadly died. If interested, email contactgreenwichtime@gmail.com and we'll pass on your details.

TOES STRAIGHT: Mara Galeazzi in Mayerling

Screen goes ballet-stic!

THERE'S top-quality culture in Woolwich this Thursday (June 13), when a live ballet performance from Covent Garden is beamed live onto the big screen in General Gordon Square.

The Royal Ballet stages Mayerling from 7.30pm, a tale of political intrigue and morbid obsession, set to Liszt's music by the Royal Opera House.

It's a free event with seating provided in the square, and there's live entertainment before the performance and at the interval.

On the big screen on Saturday June 22 and Sunday 23 is the European Athletics Team Championships. Team GB are beamed live to General Gordon Square from Gateshead Stadium.

And the hopes and dreams of the UK's tennis fans rest on Andy Murray's shoulders when the Wimbledon tennis tournament is screened from Monday June 24 to Sunday July 7. There's tennis-themed events in the square too.

There's something for music lovers from Wednesday June 26 to Sunday June 30 when the Glastonbury festival returns after an Olympic hiatus last year.

While revellers will be hoping for sun, armchair pundits and the media prefer the voyeuristic drama of the rain.

There's more sport on the big screen on Sunday June 30 when the British Grand Prix nips into the Woolwich square for more than a pitstop.

And on July 11, the Royal Opera returns with Puccini's La Rondine.

Royal Borough of Greenwich's Choice Based Lettings Scheme

Edition 343

How the lettings policy works

Housing applicants are placed within 'Bands' according to the Royal Borough of Greenwich's policy for letting homes. Your band information is on the letter that the Council sent you when you registered, or when your circumstances changed. Property adverts say which band can apply and any other criteria. When all the bids are received, the property is then offered to: For properties advertised for band A and band B - the applicant who has had this priority status for the longest time. For properties advertised for band C applicants - the applicant who has been registered on the Council's list for the longest time.

BAND

- A is for applicants in unsatisfactory housing, including people moving due to demolition and those underoccupying their homes.
- B is for applicants the Royal Borough of Greenwich must prioritise according to the law, particularly homeless people, and others with an urgent need to move for medical or welfare reasons.

Count me in, GB!

Jenna wants to be ready for Rio

by Peter Cordwell

SHE'S a five times ABA boxing champion, the venerated Boxing News wondered if she could be "the next Nicola Adams" - gold medal winner at the London 2012 Olympics - and Sky Sports programme BoxNation has interviewed her.

Sixteen year-old Jenna O'Reilly, whose sights are firmly set on Rio, 2016, is now waiting for her GB call-up.

We don't really understand why it's not happening," the Greenwich Starting Blocks star's mother, Jackie, told GT. "Jenna was supposed to fight one of the GB squad girls but she pulled out a few days before the fight. It seems that none of the girls in the squad want to box Jenna.

"She'll be boxing at the Alexandra Palace on June 20 and Box Nation will be making a film on her for Sky. My husband is Irish so we can go that route but really she wants to box for GB."

Jenna's 15-year-old sister is a GB gymnast also supported by Starting Blocks, as is 13-year-old boxer Frank. Reggie, nearly 11, is also following the pugilistic path.

Further proof of Jenna's standing in the women's boxing world came in an interview on an American website. She told theringside.biz: "I started boxing at the age of 13 because my cousin Leo 'The Lion' O'Reilly was a professional boxer. I tried other sports but boxing just stuck.

"The hardest thing I have had to face is not being offered GB trials. I guess all I can do is keep winning. I can't be ignored if I keep winning and beating the best out there!

"I spoke to Nicola Adams and Katie Taylor and they helped me believe never giving up on your dreams.

"Hopefully, I will get to Rio in 2016 and win gold. I would then like to go to the next Olympics but I will 100 per cent turn pro!"
